Once in a small town, there was a kind vet named Dr. Layla. She loved all animals and spent her days helping them feel better. One sunny afternoon, she received a call about a little puppy named Max who had hurt his paw while playing.

Dr. Layla rushed to the park where Max was. When she arrived, she saw the puppy in pain. A group of children gathered around, worried about their furry friend. Dr. Layla knelt down and gently examined Max's paw. He had a small thorn stuck in it.

“Don’t worry, Max. I’m here to help you,” she said softly. The children watched as Dr. Layla carefully removed the thorn and bandaged his paw. Max wagged his tail and licked Dr. Layla’s face to thank her. The children cheered, calling her a hero.

From that day on, Dr. Layla became known as the town's hero vet, always ready to help animals in need. And every time Max saw her, he barked happily, remembering the day she saved him.
